WHAT TYPE OF SLAUGHTER DO I NEED FOR MY ANIMAL?

CUSTOM-EXEMPT

Custom exempt facilities provide slaughter and processing service to animal owners. Custom exempt operators must return meat products to the original owners. Products must be marked NOT FOR SALE and are intended to be consumed by the owners, family members, and non-paying guests. These operators are required to be licensed, and are licensed and inspected by WDA to monitor compliance with state and federal requirements.

- Custom products may not be donated.
- Ownership of the animal must be established prior to Custom Slaughter. Proof of ownership must take place by Brand Inspection or Bill of Sale.

STATE INSPECTED

State inspected facilities are under continuous inspection by WDA from the time the animal is delivered to the facility through final processing. The meat processed in a state inspected plant can be bought and sold to any store or individuals within the state but cannot be sold out of state. These operators are required to be licensed, and are licensed and inspected by WDA to monitor compliance with state and federal requirements.

- State Inspected products may be donated.
- Intrastate Commerce ONLY
- State Inspected plants can also perform Custom-Exempt slaughter.

USDA INSPECTED

These inspected facilities are under continuous inspection by USDA from the time the animal is delivered to the facility through final processing. USDA further regulates the inspected meat through delivery to the customer. USDA inspected meat can be sold to individuals, retail establishments, and wholesale channels. These operators are required to be licensed, and are licensed and inspected by USDA to monitor compliance with state and federal requirements.

- USDA products may be donated.
- Interstate and Intrastate Commerce.
- USDA Inspected plants can also perform Custom-Exempt slaughter.
